DR. EDMUNDS ON ALCOHOLIC BEVERACES.

At Association Hall yesterday afternoon, Dr. James Edmunds, of the Royal College of Physicians at London, delivered an address to women on the se of alcoholic beverages. The Doctor was greeted by a large and attentive audience of ladies, who perance Union, and Mrs. Resecca Collins presided ever the meeting, introducing Dr. Edmunds.

The lecturer proceeded to say that he would only give the experience of a practising physician in regard to the uses of micoholic beverages, and that he considered himself a mere accident great temperance work. He only came to New fork to have a six weeks rest where letters and telegrams would not be likely to follow him.
"Wherever drinking is." said the speaker, "there arunkenness will come, and the number of drunkards will be found in ten years from this time in proportion to the number who now take their glass of wine or heer. As to the question of wars proportion to the number who now take their glass of wine or beer. As to the question of moral auty, about which so much has been said. I will say that what is physiologically wrong cannot be morally right, and what is morally right cannot well be physiologically wrong. You have got to sousider the results of alcoholic beverages on your bodies and brains, and you will then discover what your moral duty is in regard to them. I am a total abstainer because, after the careful use of simulants in my own house, the study of them in reference to life insurance, &c., I came to the conclusion that the use of them was ead. As to the substitutes' which women use, I solemnly warn you arainst them—the chlorates and pain killers'—they all sontain more or less opium, and are quite as destructive as sloohol, if not more so."

The Doctor then proceeded to discuss the source of vital power in reference to women and the differences between health and sickness, declaring that the only law to be considered was the lood occessary to feed and sustain the body; and if that food could not be digested, then the body was being used up.

Dr. Edmunds declared that infants were simply

Dr. Edmunds declared that inlants were simply the addition of so many pounds to the mother's body. The mother's nursing power depended solely upon her digesting power, and warm milk all avored with tea beiore rising in the morning was the proper food for mothers; warm milk during the day, and warm milk and oatmeal portidge in the evening should be freely eaten and no stimulants of any kind. The Doctor added in conclusion, that it was a sad fact, "the babies of the ladies in London were never sober from their birth until they are weaned."

Dr. Edmunds received a vote of thanks from the meeting and addressed a general audience in the svening at the same place. He sails to-day for Europe.

"THE HOLE IN THE WALL."

On the 8th of August two young men went the house of Mr. Inzehman, at No. 199 South street, and asked for lodging, saying that they had no money, but would pay him for his trouble as on as they got work. Every day they went out together to look for work and at evening they returned, saying they could find nothing to do. They were allowed to remain, in the hope that work ould soon turn up and their circumstances be mproved. The room in which the young gentlenen-whose names are William Madison and Wiliam Mitchell-lodged was immediately next to Mr. nam antenen-loaged was immediately next to ar. inzehman's, from which it was separated by a board partition. During their leisure moments, as it appears on the acidavit on file in the Tombs, the young men cut a hole in one of the boards and used to look in at Mr. Inzenman going to bed. This, of course, was not a very great crime, not withstanding tue old gentleman's objection to it, but in their curiosity they made a discovery which was not only annoying to Mr. Inzehman but a gain to them. One night, when the light and been put out in their room, they heard a step soming up the rickety attic stairs, and in a lew moments the door of Mr. Inzehman's room opened, a match was lighted and then a candle was ignited, and through the bole in the wall they saw the old man divest himself of his raiment. From his pantaloons' pocket the old gentleman took some money and hid it in a crack in the wall, or behind the laths, where the plaster had been broken off. When the money was safely deposited the old man threw his trowsers on the floor, blew out the candle, and, ore the white zincke ironke iron the candle, quite visible in the moonlight, had ascended to the ceiling, the man was asleep. The young men watened to get up early in the morning to see if their land-lord would take the money out. They watened luzehman's, from which it was separated by a this proceeding with great interest, and resolve I to get up early in the morning to see it their land-lord would take the money out. They watched him, and he aid not remove it. So when he left they removed it, and were discovered in the act by one of the occupants of the house. When arrested the young man Mitchell acknowledged the lacts above stated, adding that the money thus obtained amounted to $2 31. Justice Morgan committed both Mitchell and Madison to await trial at the General Sessions.

ARCHBISHOP MANNING ON EDUCATION. The Child's Rights by Inheritance m God Superior to the Parents'

[From the London Times, Sept. 22.] Most Rev. Archbishop Manning on Sunday preached two sermons at St. Chad's Cathedral, ningham. The morning sermon was on education, and the Archd shop said he could underid no man who professed to be a Christian refoung to believe that to the Church of Jesus Christ had been committed the authority to equcate the people of the world. They heard of systems pulsory, free and secular. There was a great deal in this he was ready to admit, but there was a great deal which he must reject most energetically. There were now theories by which the father was advested of authority over his child; the child was held to be the property of a commune or State, and the parents might rid themselves of their responsibility and the public must educate it. A more base violation of the laws of nature or the instincts of humanity he could not conceive. No man might dispose of his child, as if that child were not equal to himself in the sight of God. Confistian children had a right to the whole knowledge of the Father, of God, and to all the sacraments and means of grace whereby they might be saved; and no power on earth could come between them and this inheritance without guit beinere God. Imperial, toys to public power was null and void if it came between a baptised child and this right of its inheritance on earth, Diristian education did not mean being taught to read the letters, to cast up figures and to write. Some of the oassest and grossest hatures on earth were lar more highly instructed in these things than some of the purest and noblest. Let no man neceive himself by passing off instruction in literary things for education. The English were a Christian people because their soucation was Christian. They were fold that education must be compulsory, and he agreed with all his heart, on condition that they would made it compulsory on everybody from the heir to the throne to the poor man's heir. If compulsion meant class legislation, he accidered it to be an injustice and an oppression. Next they were took that education must be created that showed with that the idea of compulsory was restricted, secause they were not proposing to make laws to be ansisted by Christian people, and he was ishamed that the subject of education should be alread into a battle field for sects to dispute about the payment of a penny to a scuooi where something was reapriced, secause they were not propos of education which were to be universal compulsory, free and secular. There was a great deal ready to admit, but there
